Meeting at Building Trades' Hall Makes More Threats-Court Action Likely.

The clive branch will be extended to J. Fred Kelley, chairman of the old Central Democratic Committee, by the body commonly known as the Costello committee, and if he refuses to accept it with one hand and turn over with the other the records and tunds which he now holds, legal proceedings will be instituted as a final resort.

This programme was decided upon last night by the Costello committee, of which Robert E. Matringty is chairman, at a meeting in Ruiding Trades' Hall. Resolutions were introduced by Daniel F. Fliucane and unanimously adopted authorising the officers of the committee to assume charge of the matter and resort to action in the courts if Mr. Kelley could not be brought to terms by horal suasion.

The resolutions are as follows:

Refley could not be brought to terms of horizon suasion.

The resolutions are as follows:

Resolutions Adopted.

The it resolved by the present Democratic Central Committee. That the chairman, secretary, and treasurer of this hody, representing the Democratic Central Committee. Inneeditely take such steps as may be deemed necessary on behalf of this committee to begin proceedings of a legal nature, civil or otherwise, to determine the title of this pody to all such funds, documents, &c., and to employ counsel for that purpose if found necessary:

Mr. Kelley and the other officers of the old central committee were bitterly denoted the needlesh however, the rancor gradually disappeared, and the members began talking about the olive branch and harmony. Then those who had pronounced imprecations against Kelley and his followers arose to say that they earmestly hoped their words had not been misinterpreted, that they, too, were in favor of the olive branch, and that after all they thought Mr. Kelley was a "good old harmless wheel horse of Democracy," and would soon come to terms.

Capt. Miller denounced Mr. Kelley roundly.

To often recall," he said, "the night of the primaries last May with that mob of irate Democrats in Mr. Kelley's little office, the lights out, the hour grawing late, and the chairman himself forced to the sill of the open window, while soveral talked of flytting and curses were filling the air. And I often think that the best thing that could have happened that night would have been to have thrown Mr. Kelley all the way out."

The proposed ratification meeting was discussed but no definite action was taken in the matter. Mr. Colpo's said that no replies had been received from Gov. Wilson and Gov. Marshall with respect his proposition, The plan is to hold a big mass meeting in Convention Hall in August with the Democrate Prodential and Vice Presidential conditions as the behavior and guests of honor. It August is too early to suit the convenience of the two big guns of Democracy, the date will be changed to September.
